FROU FROU SKIRTS,

LIGHT HOSIERY BARRED

Stanford University "Co-eds" Must Look Lively Not to Violate the New Rules.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—Seven fresh cardinal sins have been enumerated and marked for avoidance in the decalogue of Stanford University by Mrs. Evelyn Wright Allan, dean of the women students of the university. As a consequence the co-eds are up in haughty arms at what they call an attack on their privileges, their dignity and their taste.

Following are the rules to be observed by the co-eds at Stanford as laid down to them by Mrs. Allan:

1. Women students must not appear on the quad or about the university buildings wearing frou frou skirts.
2. Light dresses, and, particularly, "peek-a-boo" waists, should not be worn at university exercises.
3. Women students must not wear hosiery of light or pastel shades.
4. Men and women students must not stroll together in the evening in single couples.
5. Light in dormitories and house clubs must be extinguished by 10 o'clock every evening.
6. Students of the university must satisfy themselves with fewer social activities.
7. All men students calling on women students in the evening must have said their good-bys and taken their departures prior to 10 o'clock.

LIVING ON $200 A YEAR

British Judge Thinks $250 a Week
Enough for One.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Judge Willis, who at Greenwich county court said that $250 a week was quite "enough for a single man in these days," tells in an interview how he lived on $200 a year. At the age of 18 Judge Willis was earning $500 a year, being employed in Old 'Change at the top of Cheapside, and he found lodgings in Beaumont square, in Mile End road.

"I only had one room—a small bedroom—but was provided with a breakfast and a supper of bread and cheese. For this accommodation I paid $2.50 a week.

"The whole of my expenditure, therefore, for lodging was $130 a year. I always walked from Beaumont square to the top of Cheapside, three miles out and home again. The tramways did not then exist."

His clothes did not cost more than $40 per annum, and he never went to any place of amusement. "I never saw a horse race," said the judge, "or wish to know anything about one—and never gambled to the extent of a penny."

"I always bought books. I believe that a young man should have books of his own, in his own room; not books which he borrows and must read and return by a certain time."

'COON BLEW LIGHT OUT

Then He Made Off in Dark Before
Hunters Returned.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Dec. 2.—James Myers and H. B. Tuthill, of Chester, were out after coons last night and located one in a tree which it was impossible to climb. They fired thirty-five shots without dislodging him, so they fastened a lighted lantern to the tree about six feet from the ground and went for more cartridges.

On their return they found that the coon had descended, blown out the lantern light and escaped.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 2.—It became known today that Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, gave $1,000 to the campaign fund of Gov. Johnson. Before the Denver convention Mr. Lawson offered to raise a very big campaign fund in case the ticket should be Johnson and Bryan.

PRICES ON GROCERIES INCREASE
EIGHT PER CENT IN TWO MONTHS

Dealers Here Say a Further Advance Will Take Place.

EGGS SOAR ABOUT 45 PER CENT

Butter Becoming So Costly
it Must Be Kept in Bank Vault.

In two months, the prices of eggs have advanced from twenty-four cents a dozen to thirty-five cents in Columbia—an increase of about forty-five per cent. Butter costs thirty-five cents a pound; two months ago it cost thirty cents.

The average increase on vegetables and produce is eight per cent.

Columbia grocers and butchers say an even greater advance in prices will be manifest before December is past. Although, two months ago, a comparative table printed in the University Missourian showed that foods cost more here than in the large cities, dealers here are sending prices skyward with a fine disregard for the economic laws which govern the ordinary branches of business.

The accompanying table shows a comparison of the prices in Columbia on some staple food articles early in October and now. The first list was published in the University Missourian of Oct. 7 in a table comparing Columbia prices with those in Moberly, Mo., and those in Painesville, O.

The second list gives the average prices on the articles at the present and shows an increase on all articles except some cuts of meat.

Living Here a Luxury.

The complaints of boarding house keepers grow louder as the prices of groceries continue to advance. This is not surprising when the decrease in their profits on account of high prices is considered. The cost of living in Columbia, as computed by a boarding house keeper in October, is twenty-six cents a day for each person. The prices on these articles, including both meats and groceries, are about six per cent higher now than then. This would cause an increased cost of one and one-half cents per day for each person. For a woman who keeps twenty boarders, the increased cost would be thirty cents a day or $9 a month of thirty days. This is the increased cost on these articles alone and they by no means constitute the entire list of articles necessary for even the simplest diet. Other food articles have increased correspondingly and cause a corresponding decrease of the profit.

Further Increase Coming.

Grocers say the high prices on vegetables, fruits and canned goods during the cold season are due to the lack of fresh articles. The prices will continue high through the winter and it is even probable that there will be a further raise in these prices about Christmas, they say.

The prices on meat are governed by the live stock market. This market is lower now than it was in the fall, hence most of the cuts are sold at a lower price than then.

This decrease in prices on meats is about four per cent, while the increase on other articles is about eight per cent.

ART LOVERS HEAR
DR. JOHN PICKARD

He Distinguishes Between
French and American
Ideas of Tone.

Dr. John Pickard, in his lecture last evening at the museum of Archaeology where American water colors are now on exhibition, distinguished between the French and the American idea of tone in painting.

"The Frenchman's idea of tone," he said, "is the same as the American's idea of value. That is, they take tone to mean the proper amount of light, shade, and color that gives an object its proper place in the painting. The American's idea of tone is the general atmosphere of the painting. That is, if a picture is of Autumn it has good tone if everything in the picture expresses Autumn. For example, take the picture 'Love, the Ferryman.' Every line expresses Spring. Another example is the 'Snow Scene.' The general atmosphere of the picture is cold and crisp. 'In the Woods' is another good example. The whole picture has a misty, damp suggestion."

Whistler's Color Tone.

"Another kind of harmony in tone that the Americans have is tone in color. 'Esmeralda,' a portrait painting, is a good example of this quality, a green tone prevailing throughout the picture, even in the flesh. The general tone of an Autumn picture is russet, and the 'Ducks Preening Their Feathers' is dark blue. 'The Veiled Lady' is painted in a general russet tone, and the result is a great harmony. The most famous example in the history of painting of color tone is Whistler's painting of a girl in white standing on a white rug against a white background."

Dr. Pickard gave a lecture Wednesday morning on "Value in Painting," and he will give others before the close of the exhibition Dec. 7.

Grocers of Columbia who get higher prices for their goods than grocers in large cities, presented a petition to the City Council last night asking that peddlers and hucksters, whose rivalry they fear, be made to pay $100 license per year.
